本次研習主題

“Turning Fords into Ferraris: Inspiring Our Students to Take the Reins of Their Own English-Language Learning”

The purpose of this workshop is to introduce teachers of various subjects - particularly English teachers - to various strategies they can employ to instill in their Taiwanese students a possible new language-learning “attitude” that will, ideally, help them become self-starting, autonomous language learners.

In other words, our aim, mission, goal and purpose is to work together to identify practical and immediately-applicable language-learning strategies to encourage our students to challenge themselves to get their English to the next level. Please note that this will NOT be your typical “sage on the stage” lecture, in that Dr. J will request that all participants ask themselves the following questions prior to attending our presentation:

1. What is English to you, anyway, and how did/do you learn it, yourself?
2. What strategies do you currently employ in teaching your subject matter (if you are not an English teacher) that could be applied to your students’ learning of English?
3. What problems do “we” think our students have regarding their learning of English?
4. How important is culture when it comes to studying a second or foreign language?

5. What role does reading play when it comes to mastering English and how often do you encourage it amongst your students?

After working in groups, we will attempt to find the answers to these questions and pinpoint ways of instilling in our students a new perspective regarding what it means to learn, acquire and master English as a second or foreign language.

(Please note that this presentation will be delivered in both Chinese and English, depending on the audience's perceived English ability.)

Let's learn together because, like President Liao often says: "Teamwork makes the dream work!"
